Miller, Roger LeRoy Business Law: Text and Cases, An Accelerated Course
(Stamford, CT: Cengage Learning, 2015)

Grading:

Class Participation	10%	Briefs and Presentation	10%
Shark Tank Report	10%
Mid-Term Exam	35%	Final Exam	35%

1. Class Participation: All students will be expected to participate in answering and commenting on discussion questions in class. This is an opportunity for all students to discuss business law issues, and to express their opinions. An open forum for legal discussion means that all students should feel free to express their opinions and respect the opinions of others.
2. Briefs and Presentation: All students will be assigned some cases to brief. In this process students prepare a written summary of the cases, and orally introduce them to the class. See the format for briefing cases on the last two pages of this syllabus. Complete typed case briefs for the 3 cases in your assigned chapter, plus complete typed responses to the 4 legal reasoning questions at the end of the case entitled "case analysis".
3. Shark Tank Report: Watch a new episode of Shark Tank (September or October 2015), on ABC-TV or on www.abc.com. Prepare a 3-5 page report, double-spaced, no particular format required. Comment on what transpired on the show, whether or not you agreed with the individual Sharks, and what would you have done if you were a Shark on the show.
4. Mid-Term Exam: The exam will cover course materials (reading assignments, lecture notes, discussion topics, etc) for Chapters 1 through 11. The exam is 90 minutes (1 1/2 hours) long, consisting primarily of multiple choice, true-false, and short-answer essay questions.
5. Final Exam: The exam will cover course materials (reading assignments, lecture notes, discussion topics, etc) for Chapters 12 through 19. The exam is 90 minutes (1 1/2 hours) long, consisting primarily of multiple choice, true-false, and short-answer essay questions.

[Note that the case brief is normally between ½ to 1 page typed]

BUS-18: Sample Legal Brief

Goss v. Lopez

Facts: Students in the Columbus, Ohio, public schools brought this suit. The students claimed that their constitutional right to due process had been violated when they were suspended temporarily without a hearing prior to their suspensions. The Ohio Code provides for free education for all students between the ages of six and twenty-one. Principals may suspend students for misconduct for up to ten days or expel them. In such cases, the school officials must notify parents of the suspension or expulsion within twenty-four hours and include a notice of the reasons. Suspended students may appeal to the board of education. The suspensions of the ten students, who brought this action, occurred during a period of widespread unrest in the Columbus public schools.

Issue: Whether students may be suspended for ten days or less without due process of law.

Rule of Law: Suspensions of ten days or less are not de minimis. Due process is required before school officials can suspend students.

Reasoning: Under Ohio law, the plaintiffs had a right to public education; therefore, school officials must accord them due process before depriving them of protected interests. Schools have broad authority to establish and enforce standards of conduct; however, such authority is subject to constitutional limitations. Students have a property interest under the Fourteenth Amendment to an education. The court reasoned that “the State is constrained to recognize a student’s legitimate entitlement to a public education as a property interest which is protected by the Due Process Clause and which may not be taken away for misconduct without adherence to the minimum procedures required by that Clause.” The Due Process Clause also protects liberty interests to a good name and reputation from arbitrary action by the state. Short suspensions are less intrusive on students’ rights than are expulsions; however, exclusion from the educational system for ten days is not de minimis.

In order to protect property and liberty interests, courts cannot permit school systems to impose suspensions in any way they deem appropriate. If due process applies, what process is due? Due process requires notice and a hearing prior to suspension for ten days or less. A hearing consists in giving the student “an opportunity to explain his/her version of the facts.”
