Other Important Information

Participation

The material we address in this course will often be controversial, politically and emotionally charged, and deeply relevant to each one of us. Therefore, from time to time it might be challenging for us to realize that others will have entirely different points of view that, although different from our own, will be based on entirely reasonable interpretations of the same facts that we are looking at. This core challenge of academic discourse is also its most precious quality. Mature, reasoned dialog about the same material involving multiple informed and thoughtful perspectives is the essence of the academic learning community. In other words, in all our work together, our goal is to maintain an inclusive, safe space that honors the value and dignity of our individual life histories, perspectives, and intellectual work. Ultimately, the main reason I value participation so much in teaching English is that the classroom can become a laboratory in which we can all practice how to build a better, more inclusive world together.

I do expect all students to participate actively and constructively in this class. Aside from demonstrating the attributes of good academic citizens that the above paragraph describes, I also expect each one of us to do the assigned reading before coming to class, to have read it critically using active reading strategies, to have taken notes about the reading that capture your reactions and analytical insights, and to be prepared to talk about the reading in terms of its content and the choices the authors have made. Analyzing the reading material will occupy much of our class time, and it is essential that you work hard on the reading assignments before we meet if you wish to make the most of your opportunity to develop these abilities this semester.

In addition to demonstrating a commitment to oneself and the class by actively engaging with the reading material, I also expect students to be writing almost constantly while enrolled in this class. Some of the writing for this class will be informal journal entries that are designed to help you think more carefully and accurately about the reading material and your reactions to it. Some of the writing will be prewriting and exploratory exercises that will help you develop your ideas and arguments for your formal writing assignments. And, of course, some of the writing for this class will take the shape of argumentative essays. I will award credit for simply completing the first two categories of writing assignments for this class; in other words, I will judge your written participation in these two course components by assessing whether or not you demonstrate that you are keeping an active reading and writing journal, and that assessment will be based upon a three-part rubric of “needs work, passing, or high passing” expectations. I will not critically evaluate your active reading and writing journal beyond looking to see if you are making it a meaningful and substantive part of your learning process. On your argumentative essays, however, I will provide constructive feedback that you will incorporate into your revision process. Sharing your writing and offering generous and supportive comments on what others have written is an essential requirement of any writing course.

Course Objectives

1. Employ a variety of critical reading strategies to understand, analyze and evaluate a variety of college-level texts.
2. Apply a variety of rhetorical strategies in writing unified, well-supported, well-organized essays.
3. Develop varied and flexible strategies for generating, drafting, and revising essays.
4. Analyze choices in writing.

5. Integrate the ideas of others through paraphrasing, summarizing, and quoting without plagiarism.
6. Proofread and edit essays for clarity, grammar, usage and punctuation.

Attendance and timeliness

All work is due on the date specified on the syllabus or assignment sheet. If you are absent from class on the due date, late papers will be accepted without penalty only if the absence is excused. Likewise, missed quizzes, tests, and in-class assignments may be made up only if the absence is excused or due to an emergency. Excused absences require written medical, legal, or athletic documentation.

In the event that you do miss class, you are responsible for checking with your classmates to determine what concepts, issues and material I discussed during your absence. Please note that a significant proportion of the course content will only be available in class lectures, presentation and discussions, and that your knowledge of this material will be assessed throughout the semester.

Regular, on-time attendance in any college class is extremely important for student success. In fact, the most important thing you can do as a student is simply just showing up to class and being prepared to get to work. For that reason, please know that I would like you to be in class and to show up on time every day. If you do happen to have excessive absences, and that is basically more than for unexcused absences for the entire semester, I have the right to drop you from the class. Also, an instructor can penalize students for chronic or excessive tardiness, and I reserve the right to mark you as partially absent if you are frequently late to class.

Writing Lab

An important requirement of English 102 is the writing lab component that consists of at least 22.5 hours of time spent in the lab over the course of the entire semester. Our lab is scheduled on Monday and Wednesday from 12:05 to 1:05, and I will track your hourly attendance each day to make sure that you stay on track to meet this requirement. You will spend your time in lab working independently, in groups or in conferences with your professor.

Extra Credit

I allow students to revise essays after they have been graded, and I will adjust the scores based upon specific changes that reflect consideration of my comments or any other key writing, research, or argument elements. That is the best I can offer in terms of extra credit.

Turnitin.com

I require all of my English students to submit their essays to Turnitin.com, a website that scans text in order to locate any sections in a piece writing that match other sources previously published, circulated online, or uploaded into the Turnitin.com database.

Please note that I will review all apparent cases of academic dishonesty with the student and, if necessary, the appropriate administrative officials. Using another person's written work or ideas without proper attribution will result in a failing grade on the assignment and, possibly, an F in the course and academic probation.
