Course Description
A course using literature as a basis for critical thinking and composition. Students analyze issues, problems, and situations represented in literature and develop effective short and long written arguments (6000 minimum word total) in support of an analysis. This course is designed for those students who seek to satisfy both the full year composition and the critical thinking transfer requirements.
Student Learning Outcomes
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Analyze and employ appeals (e.g. logical, emotional, faulty, etc.) in written texts. 2. Write logical, well-developed, thesis-driven essays that respond to questions at issue raised by literary works. 3. Locate, evaluate, use, and document evidence from primary and secondary sources (both electronic and print) to support, develop, or validate judgments. 4. Identify and evaluate rhetorical and literary devices as representational and persuasive tools.
Special Accommodations
College of the Redwoods complies with the Americans with Disabilities Act in making reasonable accommodations for qualified students with disabilities. Please present your written accommodation request at least one week before the first test so that necessary arrangements can be made. No last-minute arrangements or post-test adjustments will be made. If you have a disability or believe you might benefit from disability related services and may need accommodations, please see me or contact Disabled Students Programs and Services. Students may make requests for alternative media by contacting DSPS at 707-476-4280.
Academic Support
Academic support is available at Counseling and Advising and includes academic advising and educational planning, Academic Support Center for tutoring and proctored tests, and Extended Opportunity Programs & Services, for eligible students, with advising, assistance, tutoring, and more.
Academic Honesty
In the academic community, the high value placed on truth implies a corresponding intolerance of scholastic dishonesty. In cases involving academic dishonesty, determination of the grade and of the student's status in the course is left primarily to the discretion of the faculty member. In such cases, where the instructor determines that a student has demonstrated academic dishonesty, the student may receive a failing grade for the assignment and/or exam and may be reported to the Chief Student Services Officer or designee. The Student Code of Conduct (AP 5500) is available on the College of the

Nature, Culture & Community – Connections & Interpretations

Course Texts:

Their Eyes Were Watching God, Zora Neale Hurston

Ceremony, Leslie Marmon Silko

Handouts and electronic documents available through the course's Canvas site

Selected texts: (you will choose one: Refuge, Terry Tempest Williams; A River Runs Through It, Norman Maclean; New and Selected Poems, Volume One, Mary Oliver)

Overview of the course:

As the title of this course claims, we'll be inquiring into literature critically. That means we'll be reading complex works of literature, discussing them together, examining their meaning and ramifications about our culture and our thinking, and communicating our ideas to one another throughout the process. We'll be writing regularly, in several forms, including the long-form Final Research Essay.

Outcomes:

If you successfully complete this class, you should be able to:

1. Analyze and employ appeals in written texts.

2. Write logical, well-developed, thesis-driven essays that respond to questions at issue raised by literary works.

3. Locate, evaluate, use, and document evidence from primary and secondary sources (both electronic and print) to support, develop, or validate judgments.

4. Identify and evaluate rhetorical and literary devices as representational and persuasive tools.

The Reading:

We will start the course reading a few poems and a short story as well as some critical and analytical works before diving into longer works of literature. The central focus of the class will be the methods by which culture makes itself present and significant through various forms of art (memoirs, fiction, poetry and the like) and philosophy (systems of belief regarding what can be known about both the physical and the intellectual or mental world). Thus, it will be especially important that you begin to explore and examine not only what you read but also how you read it. Throughout the term, I have selected texts that should promote your own individual interest and inquiry. Some of you will be encountering unfamiliar kinds of reading, but rest assured that if you approach these works with a little curiosity and the desire to explore, you'll be rewarded by gaining a deeper understanding of our national character, our history, and how works of literature have affected them. And if you follow my guidelines for this course, you will also hone your ability to make meaning out of complexity.

The Writing:

Since this is a class in both reading and writing, we will be focusing a great deal on the act of composing. You will do best to approach the process of writing if you treat it as more of an exploration than a grueling task. For instance, the most important process you will engage in during this class is inquiry, the act of raising useful questions to more fully understand ideas. Throughout the term, I will also introduce you to rhetorical and practical concepts that should aid you in performing inquiry and research, and you'll be receiving regular feedback from me and from your classmates regarding your writing.

These are the kinds of writing you will be doing:

Weekly posted Inquiry Questions (IQs): Before each Thursday class period, you will need to post two written questions to our Canvas website based on the reading and discussion from the previous class session. These questions will be used to generate research and will thus form the central part of the class. Note well: this is your class. You will need to take responsibility for its success, and the most important things you can do to ensure that success are to read critically and carefully, to take notes on your reading and viewing, and to practice forming the best possible questions you can about what you encounter. In my opinion, the most valuable thing you will take away from a college education will be the ability to ask better questions. Knowing how to ask good questions will help you through the darkest of times and will illuminate the brightest days. I also think it can be proven that the more people there are in a given society who possess this ability to form good critical questions, the better and fairer and more just the society is. We'll spend several class sessions talking about how questions work in the inquiry process, what makes a good question, and what makes a vague or pointless or useless question. If you simply commit to trying to learn how to ask better questions, everything else you do in this course will be easier.

Five Response and Reflections (R&Rs): The R&Rs consist of at least one double-spaced, size-12-font page posted to the Canvas site. These short reflections should be directly related to any questions you have or ideas that arise from the readings up to that point in the semester. Each assignment will be open through 10 pm of the day it falls due. You should look on these short writings as the beginnings of larger writing projects. Indeed, the more effort you put into these R&Rs, the easier it will be to write the Interest and Research Inquiry Essays and, ultimately, the Final Research Essay.

Two Inquiry and Research Interest essays (IRIs): These four-page explorations of ideas raised through your R&Rs should be places where you inquire more deeply into questions posed during the term. As brief examinations of ideas and reasoning, they should include passages from our texts as well as research you've garnered that assists you in coming to conclusions about questions raised in your reading. We will be discussing and practicing research at length during the term and these IRIs are the places where you'll begin to fold primary and secondary source material into your own compositions.

Final Research Essay (FRE): This six-plus-page essay will be based on one of your two IRIs. During the last week of the regular semester, I will hold individual conferences with each of you to discuss where you are in the composition process. You should look at the FRE as the culmination of a 15-week inquiry into the concepts of nature, culture, and community through literature—and you should think of all of the writing you've done during the semester beforehand as preparation for writing the FRE. In fact, if you follow my advice and timelines for reading and writing during the semester, the FRE should practically write itself—in other words, by the time you get around to working on the FRE, you should already have done most of the work.

Grading—Students will receive grades for the course on the following basis:

Participation (attendance, posted questions, group work)	30 points
Response and Reflection essays (5 x 4 points each)	20 points
Inquiry and Research Interest essays (2 x 10 points each)	20 points
Final Research Essay	30 points
Total	100 points

Grades will be assigned on this scale: 93-100=A / 90-92=A- / 88-89=B+ / 83-87=B / 80-82=B- / 78-79=C+ / 70 – 77=C / 60 – 69=D / 59 and below=F.

SPECIAL NOTE: This class requires a good deal of writing. You should not expect to pass it unless you turn in all of the assigned writing. And bear in mind, plagiarism, which is the act of claiming another writer's words or ideas as your own without citing them as a source, is a serious breach of academic conduct and will result in failure of the assignment and possible failure for the course. If you aren't sure whether you're about to plagiarize or not, ask me for clarification.

Learning Disabilities: Students who have special needs due to physical or learning disabilities should let me know at the very beginning of the course (I mean during this first week) so that we can arrange appropriate accommodations.

An Invitation: Finally, experience tells me that people who think carefully about their education and become more reflective about it generally have the greatest success. Probably the best way to get involved in this process is to get to know your teachers and speak with them outside of the classroom. Talk to them after class. Visit them in their offices. Make appointments and let them know what's going through your mind as it relates to your work in their classes. And most important of all, let your teachers know if something in particular isn't coming across clearly for you. Sometimes your problem is just a particularly difficult concept, a complex section of reading, or a challenging assignment or series of assignments. You especially need to communicate with me—this is a very involved class that will require a lot of discipline from you. If you feel that you are falling behind, you should let me know right away. If you ask, I will offer plenty of extra help and even direct you toward others who can help. If you choose to sign up for English 52, you can meet with other English instructors in the Writing Center in LRC 102. I have also kept my office hours minimal or by appointment in order to give students maximum flexibility for meetings. Even if our schedules seem to clash at first glance, come see me—I will definitely be able to schedule a time to meet. If you have to contact me, please call my office (476-4314) and leave a clear, specific message, including a telephone number and time when you can be reached. I will get back to you as soon as possible. I look forward to getting to know each of you better and to seeing all of you succeed. Welcome and good luck!
