Catalog Description

An exploration of the conceptual material presented in OCEAN 10. Students will acquire practical laboratory and field experience using oceanographic skills, tests, and procedures. Laboratory exercises focus on chart reading, measurements of seafloor movement, seawater chemistry, wave celerity, and microscopic analysis. Field experience includes examination of coastal geology, wave and beach processes, habitats and marine organisms. Note: This course includes field trips to various marine and coastal areas. The College does not provide transportation.

Course Student Learning Outcomes (from course outline of record)

1. Use the formal methodology of the scientific method as an inquiry-based tool to critically evaluate oceanic phenomena.
2. Demonstrate the skills necessary to utilize basic instruments, tools, and tests used in oceanography.
3. Apply classification systems to organize and identify marine features and organisms.

Prerequisites/co-requisites/ recommended preparation

OCEAN10 - Introduction to Oceanography

Please let me know about any specific challenges or technology limitations that might affect your participation in class. I want every student to thrive.

Evaluation & Grading Policy

Grading:

Your performance on the weekly laboratories and final research project determine the grade you receive. There are 1,000 points available and grades are assigned by the percentage of total points as follows:

1000 - 900=A | 899 - 800=B | 799 - 700=C | 699 - 600=D | <599=F

Grading Summary:	Points
Laboratories	600 (40 pts each lab)
Lab notes	200 (25 pts each weekly entry)
Individual Research Project	200
Total Points:	1,000

Attendance via ConferZoom for all virtual labs and field trips are required. Oceanography 10L - Laboratory in Oceanography augments the Ocean-10 course and culminates with an individual research project of the real-time oceanographic data observed during the semester. The oceanographic observations are derived from a variety of sources currently available for the Humboldt County coastline. The laboratory develops skills reading charts, using digital data loggers, collecting field observations, and interpreting laboratory and microscope data. Time will be made available during the semester to work on the project. The product will be designed, written and completed by each student with assistance from the Oceanography faculty at College of the Redwoods.

Virtual field sampling will take place each week with trips to Trinidad pier to collect water quality data, note oceanographic observations and collect plankton samples. You will need a journal to record your observations, insights and ideas from each field trip, and to contribute to the final project. Your notebook will record the basic observations, winds, temperatures, floods, etc. that occur during the semester and be part of your final grade. This data set will be summarized and put together by each student toward the end of the semester.

Grading is based on lab attendance, virtual field trip participation, lab notebook and your contribution to the final project. In order to successfully complete the lab work you will need a notebook, calculator, ruler, and writing supplies with an optional set of colored pencils for some labs. The following is a list of topics that may be included as part of the final poster.

- Topographic and Bathymetric Profiles of the coastal hills, bay and ocean
- Environmental description of the bay, sand spit, sea cliffs, and coastal seafloor
- Beach survey the South Spit of Humboldt Bay 2 separate times in several locations
- A plot of the tides and rainfall runoff and the water clarity of the South Humboldt Bay
- Time series of the temperature, salinity, Secci depth

- Observations of sea state conditions and the marine weather
- Collection and identification of plankton samples
- Observation of abundance and change of migratory fish, mammals, birds.

The final project will be a poster of the field data, observations, events, and sample analyzed during the semester. The final product is an individual effort, but students have the option to collaborate. There are several components need to be included on the final poster: Title, Figures, Graphs, Illustrations, Figure captions, Poster Layout, Data processing, Research, References, and Final Production.
